If you don’t know what Mad Libs is, it’s a story that has blanks. Each blank has the part of speech that must be written in to complete the story. The twist is that you ask another person for the words based on the part of speech without them knowing the story. When it’s read back, it can be dry, silly, or rolling hilarious. It’s a great way to help children to recognize parts of speech, agreement, conjugation, and singular vs plural. I copy the pages while blank and have them do one at different times, or I make them give me all nouns, verbs, adjectives, etc at once. It’s new every time.

My kids love Mad Libs and had a really fun time playing with these ones. I like that they get them thinking and that they’re often really funny. A good thing for rainy or cold days. They’re old school fun, but they’re nice.

Bought a variety of Mad Libs books for gifts and the kids really enjoyed them.
My favorite growing up and again as an adult filling in these mad libs with my Son! Lends itself to analytical thinking while having fun!

Hysterical bunch of Mad Libs. Great for science geeks!

My kids love mad libs. It indirectly helps them learn about parts of speech. And it’s great to hear them giggle so much:)

I always loved Mad Libs as a kid so I had to get the Mad Scientist one for my science loving son. Just as fun as I remember.

My son loves these! And it helps him with learning nouns, adverbs, adjectives, etc. In the process!
